On Writing...

This class aims at moving students closer to the model of an “expert” writer where one is able to make informed decisions about any writing task and employ a wide range of tools and strategies to write the best possible paper—not just any paper. It is designed to get students to think beyond their own personal experience and use sources not just as storehouses of information, but as works to engage, debate, and utilize to some greater end. The course will require students to write several essays that will culminate in the creation of a documented research-based argument essay.

Aside from the mechanics of writing essays, we will be spending quite a bit of time developing critical thinking skills as we work with ideas and improve the content of our writing. Several essays will be brought in for us to comprehend, discuss, and respond to in order to yield material for assignments. These short works will be on a variety of subjects and we will look to cultivate observations, arguments, and ideas that will fulfill the expectations of effective college writing.

Student Learning Outcomes:

- Write a documented, well-organized research paper of at least 1,500 words that demonstrates critical thinking and command of the English language.
- Complete a timed essay independently in class
- Summarize and comprehend college-level prose (will include a full reading)

Student Learning Outcomes are statements about what the discipline faculty hope you will be able to do at the end of the course. This is NOT a guarantee: the ultimate responsibility for whether you will be able to do these things lies with you, the student. In addition, the assessment of Student Learning Outcomes is done by the department in order to evaluate the program as a whole, and not to evaluate individual faculty performance.

Course navigation:

1. Announcements will provide important direction for all aspects of the course. Announcements will be used to introduce assignments, provide reminders, and will point students to other parts of the Bb course for information (think of it as the compass to the course).

2. Modules will include lectures, instructions, essay readings, and other items that will be used as materials or supplementary information for assignments.
3. Assignments will include assignment prompts (with requirements) that must be completed and turned in. Due dates will be listed here and the link to submit assignments is located here as well.
4. Discussion Board will be used to discuss readings and assignments as a group.
5. Course Information (first module) will provide syllabus, textbook, and submission guidelines.

Textbook: A Writer's Reference, Diana Hacker and Nancy Sommers 9th ed.

Policies:

All due dates are until midnight of the day the assignment is due. Late work may be accepted for partial credit (5% deduction for each day late) with instructor's approval. However, if assignments provide a due date with the "no exceptions" clause as in the case of the "final" paper (including the "final" rough draft and annotated bibliography), then no late work allowed.

In the event of plagiarism (see Schedule of Courses for more information) the student will fail the assignment or the class at the discretion of the instructor (depending on the nature and severity of the offense).

Grading: Grading is based on a point system. 90% A 80% B 70% C 60% D 50% F (of total points available in class)
